With F.M.I.

Your Herald begins its 112th year next edition. And we are appreciative of opportunity after opportunity to contrast this seniority with latter-20th century c0mputerization.

We are asked to speak for National Newspaper Association in Beaumont. We have been asked to speak at a Southern Illinois University editorial seminar. U of T journalists find your Herald's story interesting.

Ol' Mizzou even publishes our survey of the future of "computerized journalism".

This dimension, perhaps adventure in futuristic journalism began late in 1968. It, of course, continues with hopes for some 50 more applications in newspapers by computer here, including "electronic editing" on a picture device called a cathode ray tube, linked to computer.

NOW-NOW-NOW

If this seems as if it happened overnight, even since late 1968, we can only say it is like the "overnight star" in movies or entertainment who took 15 years to be discovered.

That is about the length of time in which Herald development crystallized, through three letterpress newspaper presses to a fourth we use, offset.

You might imagine the number of times the word "nut" or "visionary" came to computer men's minds when we talked to some six manufacturers, mostly in Houston regional offices. Any other man would have sense enough to be deterred by the experts, but we know us better, don't we?

All of the foregoing really is only a preamble to where Herald staff and readers are heading. The possibilities, without further boring you, are interesting and might have some implications for the state of the printed word in a few decades.

You make it possible. You find it interesting enough to support. Your sons and daughters are contributing to this continuing story.

You allow us to tell your story, personal and civic and social and governmental on a newspaper that somehow survives what once was called "the whirligig of frontier journalism and the strenuous competion of time."

If all this says anything, it says we try to bring you, The Herald reader, the most complete picture of your Milam area in the most succinct, modern manner anywhere.

We may be the only computerized newspaper in journalism outside the daily field. And if that is so, it is because you encourage and support multiple efforts of your own people to innovate, progress and grow.

And as long as this continues, we interpret your support as a mandate to "keep on keepin' on" as a Chamber speaker told Cameron leaders the other night.

Toward the 112th year, and for all of you, these efforts proceed.

SIGN OF SPRING - Crawfishing is a favorite fair weather sport for children in the neighborhood of 6th and Jackson where they have dubbed a shallow stream of water 'Crawfish Creek.' Here Susan Raymond, Vickie Brashear, Jeff Boutwell, Martin Luecke and Mike Salach dig for their catch as their faithful dog Dusky watches from the bank. On a good day 'Crawfish Creek' may yield as many as two or three dozen of the crab-like crawlers.

The census counted 9,246 white persons, 64.3 percent; 5,097 Negroes, 35.5 percent and 46 persons of other races. Total population for the county is 14,389. Water Line Extension Asked

MILANO

A proposed extension of the Milano Water Supply Corporation could add from 100 to 120 customers to the 180 connection water line if approved by members of the exisiting corporation at their March 22 business meeting. Meeting with Milano Water Corporation directors last week Henry Ivey, Farmers Home Administration supervisor, said the present Milano system could supply the proposed extension with an adequate supply of water in reserve.

Machine To Record City Vote

BELTON

Belton voters will use a voting machine for the first time in a municipal election to elect three councilmen. The machine will be rented from Bell County for the city election. In the race for three places on the council are Mayor Clifford D. Jones, councilmen Robert H. Womble and Clark Potter, incumbents, Royce Smith and Barney B. Taylor.

County Clerks Face Election Law Change

County Clerks may have an additional work load to face if pending legislation on elections and voter registration is approved by the Texas legislature.

Milam County Clerk Wayne Weiser said County Clerks may be required to register voters, accept filings from candidates and oversee primary elections for political parties.

The question of holding primary elections came after a January court ruling that held assessing of candidate filing fees to pay for primary elections was unconstitutional. This left county political parties with no means for paying election costs and brought legislation, now pending, that would put primary elections under control of the county.

Wieser said one proposal was to hold all party primary elections at the same place and time, using a different color ballot paper for each political party.

Also pending is a bill by Rep. Dan Kubiak to require party preference designation with voter registration.

Mrs. J. C. Komar and Mrs. Alvin Heft, employees of the Milam County Clerks office, attended a meeting in Austin Wednesday where proposed election code changes were discussed.

Some of the subjects discussed were: voter registration including 18 year olds; authority to conduct primary elections for different political parties; change of primary election dates; required record-keeping for political conventions, delegates and other party matters; plus permanent and continuous voter registration and changes and forms of absentee voting.

The questionnaire, offered by many legislators throughout the state, has questions ranging from "Do you favor abolishing Daylight Savings Time?" to "Would you vote for the State officials involed in the SEC Stock insurance scandal?"

Results of the survey will be announced later.

Milam County's 1970 population was classified as 50.9 percent urban and 49.1 percent rural.

An advance report on population and other statistics for the city of Cameron has not yet been released by the Census Bureau.

O. B. Harden To Head Cameron Rotary Club

O. B. Harden will take office July 1 as new president of the Cameron Rotary Club, following his recent election by Rotary directors.

New Rotary directors taking office in July include Roy Jennings, Calvin Cobb, Henry Litzman, and Wayne Mann.

Spacious Center Awaits Users

Cameron's $53,000 Community Center, open since January, stands empty except for a portion occupied by Housing Auhtority offices.

The building was designed for banquets, receptions, programs, craft classes and various other functions. It is equipped with a kitchen, tables and chairs and a separate crafts room.

Although numerous civic and social clubs agreed to sponsor programs when the center was first proposed, only one inquiry has been made to use the space since it opened.

The brick building is centrally heated and air conditioned. An attractively designed interior has cathedral ceiling, paneled walls and large glass sliding doors that open to two patios.

Fred Starnes, Cameron Housing Authority manager, said this week that the local board hoped the center would be used by individuals for receptions and family reunions and that programs would be planned for the community or specifically for the elderly in the community.

But to date, nothing has been started.

Major stumbling block to using the building is the lack of operating funds. The center needs at least a part-time director, craft supplies, kitchen cooking utensils and dishes. There are no public funds available for these essentials.

"We feel sure that when the public sees what we have here they will want to use the facilities," Starnes said. "We also feel that people will be willing to donate some of the supplies we need to get started."

An open house is planned in the near future.

Suggestions for using the center include:

Regular programs designed for the elderly and sponsored by area church groups;

Rehearsal location for a civic theatre or childrens theatre classes;

Home Demonstration Club sponsored programs on homemaking;

Craft and sewing classes;

Weekly card and domino game days sponsored by local church or civic groups.

Folk dancing.

Financing for the future might be a combination of United Fund, Housing Authority budgeting and private donations, Starnes said. But United Fund and Housing Authority bduget would be a year away. For the present public involvement is needed.

Hope Is Not Naivete...

John W. Gardner, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare in the Johnson Administration, is often quoted since his writing of "The Recovery of Confidence." He is active in a metro-oriented movement called "Common Cause", which hopes to see bi-partisan solution to national problems, particularly where they are most common, in city and suburb.

He sees a national need as we have seen a need in Central Texas as well for cohesive thinking and doing. And what he says is most hopeful for and mindful of a nation of even greater potential than our history books say this one is.

Writes Gardner:

"We will not find a way out of our present troubles until we have the courage to look honestly at evil where evil exists, until we call injustice and dishonor by their right names, and until a large number of Americans from all sectors of opinion--right, left and center--are willing to acknowledge their own special contribution to our troubles.

"Only then will we be ready for the vision of something better. Only then will we be ready for the hard, long, exciting task of building a new America. Only then will we be ready to explore new dimensions of human aspiration and achievement. Only then can we be united again in an inspiring purpose."

Some observers note Gardner is highly quotable, but almost too hopeful.

We incline to think hope is a hard thing to find when leadership looks at a glass and finds it half empty. We think hope is a hard and real commodity to employ when leadership looks at a glass and finds it half full.

One need not be naive to be hopeful.

Letters to the Editor

March 9, 1971

Dear Frank:

There are many controversial items here in the Legislature this session which affect each and everyone of us in the State of Texas. Many legislators throughout the state are asking the help of their newspaper publishers by running the enclosed questionnaire in order to gain opinion on these matters.

I will greatly appreciate it if you will run this questionnaire in your paper. This will give many of our constituents an opportunity to express their opinions on these matters. Their answers will give me greater insight into our people's wants and needs in these areas.

Please know that I appreciate all that you are doing for me.

Yours very truly,
Dan Kubiak

The Diplomatic Pouch

Washington, D. C. -- The following letters were recently answered by the Department of State:

Conservation of Whales

Ecologic conditions could destroy much of the world's fisheries if the sperm whale population is destroyed. I recently read in the press that you are trying to persuade the Japanese to reduce their slaughter of whales. It appears to me that now that the import ban on whale products has been made official by publication in the federal register, it will be easier for the Japanese to appreciate your viewpoints.

S.P.F.
State College, Pa.

Dear S.P.F.:

The Department of State has a deep concern for the conservation of the stocks of whales, as well as other living resources. We are convinced, however, that in the case of animals which occur in international waters or which migrate across national boundaries the only realistic way to achievement of effective conservation measures lies in international cooperation and agreement. We have, therefore, been working diligently within the International Whaling Commission to put into force effective conservation regulations.

In connection with the recent action by the United States to prohibit the importation of certain whales and whale products, it might be added that the United States by no means controls the world market for whale products and therefore can not hope solely by unilateral measures to control the harvest of whales.

For example, over the past few years this country imported on the average only about 19 or 20 per cent of the world sperm oil production annually. Moreover, while the prohibition of imports of sperm oil strikes hard at Japan and other countries, it is likely to have little if any effect on Soviet Union whaling since the U.S.S.R., by far the world's largest producer of sperm oil, exports no significant quantities of this commodity to the United States.

Relief Gifts for Romania

I would like to have your assistance in learning how to transmit funds, bedding, and clothing to relatives in Romania who have been affected by that country's recent floods.

A.G.S.
Sun City, Ariz.

Dear A.G.S.:

We are advised by the Romanian Embassy that packages with gifts such as clothes, blankets, sheets, etc., sent to Romania may enter that country duty free until April 30, 1971.

You may send any amount of dollars to your relatives in Romania through your own local bank, which may transfer such funds to the Romanian Bank for Foreign Trade in Bucharest for the benefit of any parties whose names and addresses you designate.

Youth and Foreign Policy

Is anything being done by the Department of State to establish a dialogue with concerned young people about U.S. foreign policy?

T.M.D.
College Park, MD.

Dear T.M.D.:

The Department of State welcomes the concern of young people about foreign policy and is doing something about it through a number of programs using every available modern medium of communication to establish just such a dialogue. This is all being coordinated by a Special Assistant for Youth and Student Affairs in the Bureau of Public Affairs. We are enclosing a pamphlet describing these programs, entitled "Youth and Foreign Policy." Copies of this pamphlets are available free of charge from the Public Inquiries Division, Office of Media Services, Department of State, Washington, D.C. 20520.

Do you have an inquiry about U.S. foreign policy? Send it to:

Two Public Classes Open For Show

Have a favorite pot plant or a yen to try your hand at a flower arrangement?

The Fleur de lis Garden Club has set two classes for non-members in their April 21 flower show "Heritage Trails of America." The classes are open to adult, non-members of the Fleur-de-lis Garden Club and will each be judged on its own merit.

The show will be open to the public from 3 to 6 p.m. at Methodist Fellowship Hall. Judging will be by Nationally accredited Flower Show judges.

Mrs. James Camp, Garden Club president, said they hoped to have a good representation by the community in the two classes. "We think it will make our show more interesting and we hope it will interest more people in flower arranging and plant growing."

Blue, red and yellow ribbons will be awarded in the special non-member classes.

Club members will be exhibiting flower arrangements in six divisions: Texas Forts Trail, California Missions Trail, Old West Vacation Trail, Hiawatha Pioneer Trail, Dixieland Trail, and New England's Heritage Trail.

There will also be a division for flower arrangements made by children of club members.

Additional information about entering pot plants or flower arrangements is available from Mrs. William Kelm, Flower Show Chairman, or from committee members Mrs. Forrest Sapp, Mrs. Ed Magre, Mrs. Don Humble, Mrs. Donald Marquart and Mrs. Dana Kestenbaum.

UNZIPPED MAIL IS TROUBLE

Trouble for your local Post Office. Because it requires up to 5 additional sorting operations. (Which can make sacks and sacks of mail miss their plane and train.)

Trouble for a whole string of Post Offices along the way. (An unzipped letter makes more stops.)

Trouble for you and the person who's waiting to receive your letter. (An unzipped letter may take longer to reach its destination.)

In fact, trouble for everybody who uses the mails. Because every unzipped letter slows things down.

That's trouble for the whole country.

Buckholts Classes Go To Austin

Buckholts High School seniors, juniors and sophomores enjoyed a trip to Austin Monday, March 8 where they viewed the Apollo spacecraft.

Along with their sponsors, Mr. and Mrs. Johnson and Principal Hauk, they also went to the Natural History Museum where they saw "lots of old bones, rocks and skeletons of prehistoric animals, relics of early settlers and their furniture and books."

In addition to seeing Appolo 11 spacecraft and moon rock, the group visited the State Capitol, the Texas Archives building, and the Art Museum.

The all-day trip was termed a big success.

Education Benefits Available For Veterans Widows

Jack Coker, Veterans Administration Regional Office Director at Waco, reported 175,000 widows of veterans who died of service - connected disabilities and 65,000 wives of veterans totally disabled in service are eligible for generally up to 36 months of education benefits.

He noted that 8,324 widows and 1,868 wives have already received such benefits, with December 1970 as the peak month when 4,582 were in training. The number of participants is expected to go even higher in the upcoming spring school semester.

Wives of veterans with service-connected total and permanent disabilities, and widows of veterans or servicemen who die of service-connected causes are eligible under a law which became effective December 1, 1968.

He also pointed out that Public Law 91-584, the prisoner of war bill signed last December, made a small number of additional wives eligible for educational benefits.

Coker urged wives and widows interested in educational assistance to contact their nearest VA office, or their local veterans service organization representative.

OUTDOORS IN TEXAS

BY VERN SANFORD

Many anglers remain seated while they are boat fishing for bass. It's more comfortable. But it has its disadvantages!

In the first place, most anglers don't cast as accurately while seated.

In the second place, they can't set the hook as hard and therefore lose some of their finest catches, especially the tough-mouthed, wily lunkers.

Thirdly, if they remain seated while fighting the bass, their control over the lively ones is limited by how fast the angler can twist and turn the upper part of the body.

One has far greater freedom of movement while standing . . . thanks to more agile footwork and greater freedom of the arms, wrists and hands.

So, if you sit and fish, arise the moment you get a strike. Set the hook hard and pull the arms high, the better to take up all slack in the line instantly. Keep the rod tip UP so you'll get the full benefit of all the give that's in the upper part of the rod.

Above all don't point the rod at the fish, for then you lose the benefit of all the action there is in the rod, which is designed to "give and take" . . . and tire the fish.

Don't attempt to "horse him in." Tire him out, then lift him in . . . preferably by net.

There are exceptions, of course. In thick, brushy areas you'd better land him as soon as you can, even if you have to immediately hoist him over the side of the boat and flip him aboard in one and the same motion. It's a dangerous method but sometimes it's the one and only. Trouble here is that in your haste to land the critter you may bang him against the side of the boat and knock him off the hook.

In brush areas you need a stiff rod with very little give or flexibility.

Tell "Mom" that's why you need three rods for bass fishing—a fast action rod, that's limber and lively, for small fish; a medium action rod for ponds and lakes; and a tapered stiff action rod with a flex-tip for the obstacle courses—such as lily ponds, weeds, underwater brush and rocky areas.

Naturally you need different rods for the Gulf Coast.

1. An open-face spinning rod and reel for the bays—for speckled trout, flounder, whiting, etc.

2. A medium-flex, spool-type rod and reel combo for the larger fish.

3. A heavy rod with a large spool-type reel that will accommodate heavy line, for the big ones like the ling, warsaw, etc.

4. A long, lanky, double-handle, distant-casting "pole" for wade fishing and bank casting.

America Threatened From Both Sides, Says Editor

WACO

America, as a free society, is clearly threatened from both the right and the left, Dr. James E. Wood Jr., has written in the autumn edition of Journal of Church and State.

Wood, journal editor, wrote in his editoral on civil disobedience, "From the right are mounting potential forces of repression aimed at stifling all civil dissent and civil disobedience, and from the left emerging threats of destruction and overthrow of the society and its institutions."

Wood said, however, there is no question but that the forces of repression are greater than the forces and power of revolution in the United States.

He maintained that civil disobedience, though often opposed by many on biblical grounds, is firmly rooted in Christian teachings.

Wood said if civil dissent and civil disobedience are to have a valid and viable place in contemporary American life, and if the potential role of high religion in the free society is to be realized, then "some historical and theological perspective is sorely needed."

While those who oppose civil disobedience on biblical grounds do so on the basis of Romans 13, Wood said they are clearly out of harmony with the larger context of scripture.

"Clearly, in biblical thought, there are times when Christian obedience requires civil disobedience," he said.

Paul's adminition to Christians to "be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed" is a "plea to Christians (everywhere) to avoid the tendency to be mere conformists to the norms of this world," he said.

Wood said that although Jesus was not a political revolutionary, he was convicted of the crime of insurrection by the state. He also noted that historically Christians and the church often have resisted the state.

It is "whenever and wherever (the church is) allied with the power structures, economic or political, the church has become a highly conservative voice in defense of the status quo and, at the same time, an opponent of dissent and civil disobedience."

It was the establishment of the Christian state concept of the Middle Ages that "severely obscured the role of civil disobedience for Christians in Europe," he said.

"Nothing could be further from Paul's teachings than to assert that all laws and officials, regardless of the demand, must be obeyed," Wood said. "Paul's view is that the state is God's minister, not that Nero is God.

"Within the Judeo-Christian tradition, civil disobedience is seen not as repudiation of political authority, which is divinely ordained, but rather an expression of commitment to a higher power than the state, the sovereignty of God."

Marihuana Facts

Pertinent facts that dispel fables about marihuana are given in a concise leaflet issued by the U.S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare's National Institute of Mental Health.

Under the title, "Marihuana Fables and Facts," the leaflet summarizes ten important misconceptions and then presents the true facts about them, based on the latest scientific knowledge.

Examples of these fables and facts:

Fable: Marihuana is harmless

Fact: Instances of acute panic, depression, and psychotic states are known to have been caused by marihuana, although they are infrequent.

Certain kinds of individuals can also become over-involved in marihuana use and center their lives around it. We do not know the effects of long-term use of marihuana.

Fable: Marihuana is a narcotic.

Fact: Marihuana is not a narcotic except by statute. Narcotics are opium or its derivatives (like heroin and morphine) and some synthetic chemicals with opium-like activity.

Fable: Marihuana is addictive.

Fact: Marihuana does not produce physical addiction because symptoms do not occur when marihuana is suddenly withdrawn. But marihuana can produce psychological addiction or dependence, called habituation.

Fable: Marihuana leads to increase in sexual activity.

Fact: Marihuana has no aphrodisiac or sex-stimulating properties.

Fable: More severe penalties will solve the marihuana problem.

Fact: Marihuana use has increased enormously in spite of severely punitive laws.

Fable: It is safe to drive while under the influence of marihuana.

Fact: Driving while under the influence of any intoxicant—marihuana, alcohol, or whatever—is hazardous.

Schillers Pharmacy 58 Years Service

No one can remember a time when there was no pharmacy at 106 S. Houston, where E. O. Schiller Pharmacy is located.

Since 1885, a drug store or pharmacy, 58 of those years Schiller's, has dispensed reliable service and first-line products at this location.

Today, E. O. Schiller Pharmacy is a two-pharmacist drug, gift and notion center, its wares modern amidst a modern lighted building and antique shelving.

E. O. Schiller, Jr., operates the well stocked center for professional pharmacy and services bearing both his and his father's name, who assists in the daily operation.

Since remodeling in 1962, exclusive lines in cosmetics for men and women and fragrances for women at Schiller's now include Helena Rubenstein, Faberge and English Leather.

Gift items include a Justin line of billfolds and related leather goods and the Parker line of pens, pencils and ballpoints for the discriminating shopper.

Pharmaceuticals worked from doctors' prescriptions are the finest and carefully prepared by Schiller staff pharmacists.

The list of brand-name items for home and family use is endless along Schiller shelves. Reliability and value are first considerations on any item stocked at Schiller's.

A full line of pocketbooks and magazines gives the reader a mini - library to choose from. Separate racks for detective, Western and fiction and non-fiction allow ample selection on the latest novel or action-packed detective novel. Non - fiction books are quite available.

Another Schiller feature is photo finishing service where black-and-white film is processed and ready for the customer in two day minimum and color film in five-day minimum. Prices are reasonable. Quality is guaranteed.

Oscar Schiller, himself employed at Schiller's since 1915 serves on customers and Mrs. Clara Biskup assists buyers needing gifts and personal notions throughout the store.

Both Schillers produce prescriptions to doctors' requirements.

They can also point to an area behind the present store, a half level higher, where Drs. Epperson and Sapp used to office. After World War II, the space once occupied by medical doctors and building owners was closed off from active use.

Ed Schiller, Jr., completed his degree in pharmacy at the University of Texas College of Pharmacy before going into the service. He returned after the War to enter the pharmacy profession in the family store.

And this Schiller Pharmacy is a family store which serves needs of each member of your family in a tradition that continues with pride.

Fable: Marihuana is harmless

Fact: Instances of acute panic, depression, and psychotic states are known to have been caused by marihuana, although they are infrequent.

Certain kinds of individuals can also become over-involved in marihuana use and center their lives around it. We do not know the effects of long-term use of marihuana.

Fable: Marihuana is a narcotic.

Fact: Marihuana is not a narcotic except by statute.

Narcotics are opium or its derivatives (like heroin and morphine) and some synthetic chemicals with opium-like activity.

Fable: Marihuana is addictive.

Fact: Marihuana does not produce physical addiction because symptoms do not occur when marihuana is suddenly withdrawn. But marihuana can produce psychological addiction or dependence, called habituation.

Fable: Marihuana leads to increase in sexual activity.

Fact: Marihuana has no aphrodisiac or sex-stimulating properties.

Fable: More severe penalties will solve the marihuana problem.

Fact: Marihuana use has increased enormously in spite of severely punitive laws.

Fable: It is safe to drive while under the influence of marihuana.

Fact: Driving while under the influence of any intoxicant—marihuana, alcohol, or whatever—is hazardous.

Schillers Pharmacy 58 Years Service

No one can remember a time when there was no pharmacy at 106 S. Houston, where E. O. Schiller Pharmacy is located.

Since 1885, a drug store or pharmacy, 58 of those years Schiller's, has dispensed reliable service and first-line products at this location.

Today, E. O. Schiller Pharmacy is a two-pharmacist drug, gift and notion center, its wares modern amidst a modern lighted building and antique shelving.

E. O. Schiller, Jr., operates the well stocked center for professional pharmacy and services bearing both his and his father's name, who assists in the daily operation.

Since remodeling in 1962, exclusive lines in cosmetics for men and women and fragrances for women at Schiller's now include Helena Rubenstein, Faberge and English Leather.

Gift items include a Justin line of billfolds and related leather goods and the Parker line of pens, pencils and ballpoints for the discriminating shopper.

Pharmaceuticals worked from doctors' prescriptions are the finest and carefully prepared by Schiller staff pharmacists.

The list of brand-name items for home and family use is endless along Schiller shelves. Reliability and value are first considerations on any item stocked at Schiller's.

A full line of pocketbooks and magazines gives the reader a mini - library to choose from. Separate racks for detective, Western and fiction and non-fiction allow ample selection on the latest novel or action-packed detective novel. Non - fiction books are quite available.

Another Schiller feature is photo finishing service where black-and-white film is processed and ready for the customer in two day minimum and color film in five-day minimum. Prices are reasonable. Quality is guaranteed.

Oscar Schiller, himself employed at Schiller's since 1915 serves on customers and Mrs. Clara Biskup assists buyers needing gifts and personal notions throughout the store.

Both Schillers produce prescriptions to doctors' requirements.

They can also point to an area behind the present store, a half level higher, where Drs. Epperson and Sapp used to office. After World War II, the space once occupied by medical doctors and building owners was closed off from active use.

Ed Schiller, Jr., completed his degree in pharmacy at the University of Texas College of Pharmacy before going into the service. He returned after the War to enter the pharmacy profession in the family store.

And this Schiller Pharmacy is a family store which serves needs of each member of your family in a tradition that continues with pride.

TIC Seeks New Employers To Replace Arms Industry

In an area where cutbacks in the arms industry could cause massive unemployment, representatives of three states are attempting to attract new industry to utilize the labor force.

For many of the 22,000 people in Northeast Texas, Southwest Arkansas and Northwest Louisiana employed in ordnance manufacturing, cutbaks in military activity could mean the end of their jobs. In anticipation of such an event, the states are planning conversion from arms to furniture manufacturing.

"The problem came to light about a year ago when one firm told us their contract might not be renewed," Jim Harwell, executive director of the Texas Industrial Commission, said. "We realized that new employers would be needed in the area and started searching right away."

On a tip from a Dallas distributor, the commission looked into furniture manufacturing and found the area apparently suited to it. After meeting with the other states, a jointly financed feasibility study was undertaken.

"From the first, furniture manufacturing has looked good," Harwell said. "It relies on the area's natural resources and has a constant market, eliminating the fear of cutbacks or cancelled contracts."

The study, which was delivered to a meeting of the states' representatives in February, concluded that the furniture business "would be able to enjoy a very successful, profitable operation" in the area.

The report cited availability of labor, market, natural resources and transportation, plus favorable climate and community attitudes, as attractive features for manufacturers.

"When we received the study, we decided to take postive action very soon," Harwell said. "In May we are touring the area with 10 or 15 of the nation's top furniture concerns to acquaint them with the great potential there."

The two-day trip, financed by all three states, will take the officials in an arc from Shreveport through Texarkana. Special programs will be held in several cities along the route.

The efforts of the committee mark the first time three states have joined in pursuing an employment problem, and Harwell thinks the venture will be successful.

Facts About Drug Abuse Explain Addiction, Affects

What is meant by the term addiction as it applies to drug abuse?

Addiction is physical dependence upon a drug. Its scientific definition includes the development of tolerance and withdrawal.

As a person develops tolerance be requires larger and larger amounts of the drug to produce the same effect. When use of the addicting drug is stopped abruptly, the period of withdrawal is characterized by such symptoms as vomiting and convulsions.

A compulsion to repeat the use of the addicting drug is understandable because the drug temporarily solves one's problems and keeps the withdrawal symptoms away.

Drugs other than narcotics can become addicting. Some people have acquired an addiction to sedatives and certain tranquilizers. Stimulants in very large doses are addictive.

Whether the person is physically addicted or abuses drugs for psychological reasons, he is dependent upon drugs. Drug dependence of any kind is a serious problem for the individual and society.

WIDERANGE AFFECTS

Why do dependency producing drugs have such a wide range of effects upon different users?

The National Institute of Mental Health states that the effects of mind-altering substances are related to the expectations of the user, the setting in which the use takes place, and the potency of the drug.

Mind altering substances can have vastly different effects upon different people because such drugs release individual underlying personality traits that are ordinarily covered up.

Internal controls are diminished or eliminated; one person may become angry, another amorous, a third happy, others disoriented, confused, or depressed, and so on.

Even the same person taking the same dose of a drug on a subsequent occasion may have an entirely different response.

As self-control is lost, the person reacts to suggestions from people around him and the setting in which the drug is taken. These factors can markedly alter the drugs effects.

Drug oriented individuals often ask the question "What is wrong with taking any drug I want as long as I do not hurt anyone else by doing so?"

It is difficult for an individual to do something to himself that has consequences upon himself alone.

Inevitably, the act will have an impact on those who are close to him or those who are dependent upon him.

To "drop out" via drugs means that the person becomes dependent upon the social structure for a variety of services and supplies and someone has to pay the bill.

Now there's a new, small Pontiac with a small-car price for small-car lovers.

Upper left: Ventura II Coupe with special Sprint package you can order. Foreground: Ventura II Coupe (4-door Sedan also available).

Wouldn't you know it would be fun to drive, stingy on gas, quick to service and built to last.

Of course you would. We wouldn't build a small car unless we figured it would give you more of what you want a small car for.

Take that low price. Ventura II is a small car, so it has a low, small-car price. But it's what you get for that small price that makes Ventura II worth a close look.

Ventura II is fun to drive. It should be, it's from the Wide-Track people. Which means you get a smooth, comfortable, Wide-Track ride.

The handling's quick. There's a nifty 111-inch wheelbase for easy parking. And both the 250-cu.-in. six and available 307-cu.-in. V-8 respond beautifully in city traffic or on the expressway.

Ventura II is stingy with your gas money. Both the standard six-cylinder engine and the V-8 you can order run beautifully on regular gas or the new low-lead and no-lead fuels. The carburetor on the six is an economical one-barrel, and the transmission for both six and V-8 is a practical 3-speed manual.

Ventura II is quick to service. If you're a do-it-yourselfer, you'll like fiddling around with the new Ventura II.

New twist-lock lamp sockets let you make changes in seconds.

The engine is uncomplicated, and there is plenty of engine-compartment space, especially with the six.

If you ever need to have somebody else work on your car—well, you'll like Ventura II, too. Both the standard six and available V-8 are tough, time-tested designs. Same goes for transmissions. The standard 3-speed manual and the available 2-speed automatic, Turbo Hydra-matic or floor-mounted 3-speed are all rugged, dependable units.

Ventura II is built to last. There's nothing lightweight about this car. It's welded—not bolted—at hundreds of strategic points to help keep it tight and quiet.

The body is heavy-gauge steel. And it has double paneling in the deck lid, hood and doors. You could probably sum it up best with three little words. Body by Fisher.

So, come on. If you're a small-car lover, stop by your Pontiac dealer's today. Tell him you want to see the new Ventura II. It's the small car that gives you more of what you want a small car for.

GM MARK OF EXCELLENCE

Don't forget to buckle up for safety.

Ventura II—It's Pure Pontiac!

Youth-Military Attitude

COLLEGE STATION

Who is more receptive to military service--- a lower class youth who wants to get somewhere in life, or a youth of higher class status who wants to get somewhere?

If the question appears too easy, try this one: Who would have a more positive attitude toward the service ---a rural Negro youth who lives in the traditional South, or a rural white youth who lives in the same community?

Most readers will probably go along with the first part of each question because they assume that the lower class youth would view the military as a way out of his predicament or a means to get training or a career.

In either case, the assumption would be wrong, according to a study reported by Dr. William Kuvlesky and Jane Dameron in the January issue of the "Journal of Vocational Behavior."

The research team from Texas A&M University's Agricultural Econimics and Rural Sociology Department found that Negro and white boys were "more alike than different in their orientations and projections for military service."

In their study of 218 high school sophomores in three all-rural, non-metropolitan counties of East Texas, they also could not find support for the assumption that lower class youth are more positively oriented toward military service than youth of higher class status.

Kuvlesky and Dameron evaluated the students' attitudes toward military service by measuring their agreement and disagreement to such statements as "Every American male should want to serve in the military"; "One should not complain if he is drafted"; and "Anyone who enlists in the service is foolish."

They found that both Negro and white rural boys similarly desired military service, had strong positive attitudes about it, and "almost expected to be involved in some type of military status," although a majority were uncertain about their expected involvement.

The major difference between Negroes and whites is in their expectations of how they're going to be involved. Many more whites think in terms of either no military involvement or part-time commitment in the Reserves than did Negroes. Also, more Negroes than whites expected to either enlist or to enter officer's training in college.

Lower class youth with high aspirations to get somewhere are not necessarily more positively oriented toward military service than others, the A&M team learned. They, as well as other respondents, are equally positive in their orientation toward the military, although other studies indicate very few youth view the military as an occupational goal.

It is possible, Kuvlesky and Dameron conclude in the article, that "projection of participation in military service and a positive orientation toward it approximates a cultural universal among boys in their middle teens." The researchers point out that more extensive study is needed because of the limitations of their sample before any definite conclusions can be drawn.

The study was a contribution to the Texas Agiruclural Experiment Station research project.

Buck's Antlers Can Be Misleading To Hunters

AUSTIN

How old is an eight-point buck?

Three years old? Or four or five?

Wrong. Despite the impressive antlers, in many cases he may be barely more than a year old.

A buck's rack is good indicator for judging the animal's health, but it can be misleading to the average hunter.

A white-tailed deer which had poor nourishment when a fawn will develop into a "spike buck," or one with short, undeveloped forked antlers after a year of maturity. Conversely, a well-fed buck might develop into an eight-pointer in one year.

Therefore, biologists say, it's a mistake to protect spike bucks from hunting pressure. When you protect spikes and kill the larger bucks, you are killing the better brood stock and leaving the inferior animals, they point out.

In a recent nine-county survey in East and Central Texas, biologists examined more than 1,800 buck deer. Three-fourths of the deer were yearlings -- but only 291 were spikes. (Biologists consider an 18-month-old deer a yearling, although ranchers call cattle under one year old yearlings.)

The spikes' average weight was only 64.5 pounds, compared to 72.6 pounds average for the bucks with three or more points.

Spike bucks probably would occur rarely under ideal range conditions. This was apparent during a survey held on the Engeling Wildlife Management Area in East Texas last fall. A public hunt yielded a total of 60 yearling deer, but none of them were spikes.

Therefore, when spikes are seen it may be time to consider range improvement or a heavier deer harvest to improve the herd's quality.

Carol Prince Bowls To Third In Houston

Carol Prince of Cameron captured the third place spot in the novice division of the State bowling tourney last weekend. She bowled 485.

The tourney, being held in Houston, has now passed the halfway mark of its nine week run and there are yet some 4,000 women to compete before the windup on April 4.
